

soziologische vorträge

„How are migration-related diversity and social inequalities addressed by contemporary welfare institutions nowadays? Current research and recent debates“

Sommersemester 2021

Empirical research across Europe (and beyond) highlights how welfare state institutions are currently under pressure to develop new ways to confront migration-induced diversity in the overall populations they serve. In this series of guest lectures, we will engage in an international exchange examining different institutional challenges and strategies as to how migration-induced diversity is tackled or ignored by welfare state institutions. The ways to approach such research are manifold and include looking at practices and perceptions of multilingualism within such welfare state institutions, analysing the care crisis from an intersectional perspective, and focusing on the experiences of migrants in public institutions. The guest lectures will also address the potential social inequalities that result from the current transformations that are taking place across varying welfare state institutions and settings in Europe.

23.03.2021 um 17 Uhr

"Die Care-Krise in Großbritannien"

Emma Dowling (Universität Wien)

13.04.2021 um 17 Uhr

"Voices in Polyphony. Balancing Global Tensions in the Multilingual Classroom"

Katharina Brizic (Universität Freiburg)

11.05.2021 um 17 Uhr

"Street-level Bureaucrats dealing with Linguistic Diversity in a Monolingually-oriented Institution"

Anna-Katharina Draxl, Clara Holzinger, Elisabeth Scheibelhofer (Universität Wien)

01.06.2021 um 17 Uhr

"The Institutional Experiences of Migrants as a Case for the Study of the Relationship between Lower Classes and Institutions "

Vincent Dubois (Université de Strasbourg)