From micro to macro and back: a meso bricolage approach to the analysis of transitions

The talk will present a tentative framework to analyse transitions and critical events during the life course. It attempts to adopt a mixed methods approach to the complex interactions among levels of analysis (from micro to macro) highlighting the advantages of integrating methods. It will also make a plea for a meso institutional level as a crucial way to link micro and macro approaches. Examples from past projects will be used to put forward this argument more as a bricolage rather than a fully-fledged analytical framework.
